

The BBC Young Reporter- A Year Seven Perspective.

The BBC Young Reporter day is a chance for students across the country to find out what it means to be a journalist and learn how news is reported.

The whole day was spent in the iResearch centre, where we researched and filmed the news reports on subjects that we were passionate about.

Our group's project was about International Women's day- a day that celebrates the achievement of woman across the world. We researched the topic, wrote a script and interviewed our History teacher Ms Oljnyk. She was one of a number of teachers who kindly gave up their time to be interviewed.

Everyone was able to take part, whether on or off screen and we all had input into the report. So don't worry if you don't like being on camera, you can be the person who writes the scripts.

Overall, we loved today and will definitely take part again. We would recommend that you do too!
